

Help! I Have a Bad Haircut

By Stephanie Nolasco, June 24, 2013

Thinkstock

Share This ... Email Facebook 54 Twitter 15 Pinterest 2 8+ 0

You walked into the salon hoping to look like an A-list celebrity, but walked out with a D-list disaster. Now what?

Nothing is more frustrating than seeing a stylist chop away at your beloved locks, only to be left with a botched 'do. While you may be tempted to go into hiding until your hair grows back, there are some solutions on how you can fix — and dare we say love— your new look.

READ: Find Your Perfect Hair

Go Shopping: Make this unfortunate mishap your opportunity to find another stylist who could give you a new makeover. Stylists say to ask close family and friends for recommendations. "Don't ever just walk into a salon," warns Thomas Heinz, a lead stylist for Vogue. "If someone is available right away, chances are that the stylist is not very busy, which in turn means that they might not be very good or may not have the experience needed to help you. Always try to get a referral by someone you trust."